WHAT MAKES OUR COURSE UNIQUE

Tactical Operations Consulting instructors have an extensive background in either Law Enforcement or Military. Most instructors have served on special operations teams such as S.W.A.T. (Special Weapons and Tactics), Army Special Forces, Marine Force Recon or similar branches.

With this experience they bring the best in firearms training to the civilian, law enforcement and military world. Sharing years of knowledge and expertise in the field of personal defense.

The instructors will share their knowledge of the fundamentals of marksmanship, safety, and survival skills to develop the student's confidence in their ability to manipulate their weapon system and apply accurate fire to targets or in a worst case scenario, the defense of themselves or loved ones.

THE T.O.C. EXPERIENCE

We believe any course offering a person the ability to carry a weapon should include the training to make that person safe, confident and responsible.

We provide classroom and practical instruction on the following subjects:

- State laws and requirements to carry a weapon concealed.
- The procedure for applying for their permit
- Information on choosing a weapon system, safely storing and handling of that weapon system.

ON THE RANGE

Many students have attended our class even after receiving their permits from another training course. The reason for this is that we spend a majority of our training time on the range developing the skills necessary to carry a weapon for personal defense. In some courses you may not even fire your weapon or a very limited amount.

We have designed our course to give the student the proper fundamentals and confidence. The average student in this class will fire 200 to 300 rounds and be able to pass our simple qualification course. The instructors will work side by side with the student to ensure their success.

The courses of fire take the student from basic manipulation of the weapon to more complex fundamentals such as handling malfunctions and reloading. This is an excellent course to prepare them for our more advanced pistol training.
